

I am writing to say that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections in any way.

Before the law was passed, I averaged receiving 10-15 unwanted calls from telemarketers a week. I got so fed up I started just hanging up on them whenever they started reading me their script.

After the law passed I quickly signed up. Once my group was implemented, the calls practically stopped all together. I'd say I only get about one unwanted call a month now, and they've been from companies that I know are exempt.

Please don't do anything to change this. I like not cringing everytime the phone rings. I don't think I could handle going back to the way it was before.

Thank you for reading,

Tom Sweeney